The Bishop Addresses the Shawnee
Sunday School Convention.

ON "THE TEACHING PROCESS."

A Good Man is a Good Thing to Sit Before a Class if He is Uninteresting.

There were about 300 delegates present at the opening session of the Shawnee County Sunday School convention yesterday afternoon and evening and several visitors. Rev. L. Binkley opened the session with prayer and a praise service. "Six Essentials for a Sunday School" and "How to Improve Our Township Work," were two subjects that were discussed by Rev. Mr. McLane, Luther Stover, Miss McCombe and others, after which Rev. W. R. Hutchinson talked about "Primary Methods."

There was a better attendance in the evening. A. K. Rodgers read a devotional song service and Rev. W. L. Byers delivered an address on "Individual Faithfulness the Key to True Success." The address of the evening was Bishop Vincent's on "The Teaching Process." He said: "Every teacher should have uninterrupted opportunity to teach. That is the main thing. The principal work of the pastor in connection with the Sunday school is not to go about visiting the pupils and teachers to find out how their families are getting along. This is work that he should do on week days, work for which he is hired to do. To me, the sanctuary of the Sunday school, is when the teacher stands with her five or six pupils over the book; teacher and pupils lost to everything else excepting the lesson of the day, the kindled eye and quickened heart of the teacher and the alert and interested look of the pupils. It is a simple work. It is an important work."

"It is to be carried on by law. I believe that God accomplishes things by spiritual law as well as by natural law. 'Now in this process of teaching, I think the first thing is personal character. It is a good thing to have a good man sit before a class for thirty minutes, even if he is uninteresting. Some times I think it is better to have uninteresting goodness stand before a class than the most fascinating teacher who has no reality in her disposition. In following the teaching process, we must always take account of individuality and not trust too much to prescribed method. Everybody has his own method of teaching. It matters very little what that method is, if it is his own method."

"I believe, Sunday school teachers, that if we felt the responsibility more than we do in developing Christian character in the ethics of Christian faith, we would have more boys and girls who would say, 'I will be a Christian. I will stand up for Jesus and the church.' Let us try to be more earnest teachers."

At the session this morning the reports of the work by the president, secretary, treasurer and city and township presidents were read, and there were then fifteen minute talks on "Better Work in Our Sunday Schools" by Bradford Miller, H. Reed, Miss Maggie Hamp, W. W. Buckner, Mrs. A. J. Arnold, Mrs. Geo. Noble, W. H. Watson, R. U. Farnsworth, Clifton Groat, J. W. Sidwell, Mrs. Eva Logan, William McArthur, Wm. Vandenraad, Prof. Watkins, E. H. Keach, A. L. Stratton, I. N. George, A. B. Smith, A. J. McDowell, Mrs. N. A. Wooster, Prof. D. F. Hoover, Miss Ruth Nash, J. A. Lukens, Mrs. J. S. Austin and Cal. Bradley.

Rev. F. M. Porch taught a "Normal Lesson," W. D. Gossard delivered an interesting address on "How to Deal with the Stay Aways," and there was an address by the state secretary.

The session of this afternoon will close the convention. At this session an election of officers will take place.

It was an interesting and profitable convention.

JUDGE THOMSON GRIEVED.

He Tells Wallace's Attorneys the Instructions in the Pass-Action Suit.

S. B. Isenhardt and E. D. McKeever have returned from Alma, where they went last Tuesday for the purpose of trying the case of Thomas Wallace against the Rock Island Railway before Judge William Thomson. The case is one that has attracted some attention in the discussion of the subject of judges and passes. Judge Thomson stated to the lawyers that the publicity given his possession of a pass and the insinuations that it influenced his decisions had grieved him deeply. The case of Wallace was continued on motion of his own attorneys.

It is probable that the celebrated case may be dismissed in Judge Thomson's court and filed in the Shawnee county district court.

A POINT FOR EASTMAN.

The First Point in the Asylum Case Decided in His Favor.

MANDAMUS IS A PROPER METHOD.

Dr. Eastman's Attorney Thinks This Practically Decides the Case—Other Supreme Court Decisions.

The first point in the case of Dr. D. B. Eastman in his effort to be reinstated in his position as superintendent of the insane asylum, was decided today by the supreme court in his favor, and lawyers say that this means a victory for Dr. Eastman.

When the petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the state board of charities to appear and show cause why Dr. Eastman was not wrongfully kept out of the office was filed, the board did not answer, but instead filed a motion to quash the alternative writ. They alleged as grounds for the motion that an action in quo warranto was the proper remedy and that the plaintiff by his unexplained abandonment of the office was barred from asserting his right to the office.

The court holds without a dissenting opinion in a decision made by Chief Justice Horton, that mandamus is a proper remedy where the officer has been wrongfully removed without cause, and where a superintendent is deprived of his office and is prevented from discharging his official duties, that he is wrongfully removed from office.

Though this does not decide the merits of the case, the position of the court that Dr. Eastman was wrongfully removed is a blow at Dr. McCaskey. There is now but little doubt that the people will soon be relieved from hearing of more scandal at the asylum.

W. A. S. Bird, who is one of the attorneys for Dr. Eastman and the former steward, John Brun, said to a JOURNAL reporter: "This, in my mind, practically decides the case in our favor, and Dr. Eastman will probably be reinstated when the case comes up on its merits."

THE ODD FELLOW CASE.

Judge Hazen's Decision Holding the Assessment Legal Affirmed.

The supreme court handed down a decision affirming the decision of Judge Hazen in the De Boissiere Odd Fellow case.

This is the case where various lodges of the Odd Fellows resisted the payment of the per capita tax of $1 to pay the indebtedness and maintenance of the De Boissiere Odd Fellow home on the ground that the grand lodge had no right to make the assessment.

The case was tried before Judge Hazen in Topeka who decided that the assessment is legal and the decision of the supreme court affirms his decision.

Wells Case Affirmed.

The case of James W. Wells of Dodge City, who was convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary was affirmed and Wells will have to serve his time.

He was convicted of killing a saloon keeper named L. E. Warren, while drunk on Aug. 22, 1893.

A STORY.

Hamburg Explains Why the Marriage Did Not Take Place.

"I would like to tell you a love story," said John Hamburg at the Jockey club the other evening as he emptied his ninth glass of kummel.

"It was at Nice last week. Upon the Promenade des Anglais I noticed a very beautiful young lady leaning upon the arm of a gentleman whom, from his respectable baldness and gray beard, I judged to be her father or some near relative. I admired this young lady very much."

John Hamburg took a tenth glass of kummel.

"I saw her again the next day, and every day thereafter, but she was always accompanied by the old gentleman. At last I met her alone. I approached very politely, but in hand, and asked her:

"Mademoiselle, if I should say that I think you are very beautiful, would you be offended?"

"Monsieur," she replied, diplomatically, "every one has a right to his own opinion."

John Hamburg took his eleventh glass of kummel.

"Some time afterward I met her again alone. 'Mademoiselle,' said I, 'if I should prove that I love you, would you be displeased?' What she replied does not concern you."

John Hamburg took a twelfth glass of kummel.

"One day," he continued, "she was in my apartment about 5:30 in the afternoon and we were admiring the magnificent panorama of the Mediterranean unrolled beneath my windows, when some one knocked at the door. I opened, and the respectable bald old gentleman burst into the room crying 'Wretches!' The young lady fainted, but I did not lose my head."

John Hamburg took a thirteenth glass of kummel.

"You know me," said Hamburg. "You know that I am the most honorable man in the world, and that I do not recede before the accomplishment of a duty."

"Sir," said I to the venerable bald-head, "I see that I have involuntarily compromised this young lady, but I am ready to repair my fault. Have the honor to ask of you her hand." Will you believe it, this stupid old person refused ever to give me his consent. Then I struck him a couple of times, for I dislike to have any one mock at me like that."

John Hamburg took a fourteenth glass of kummel.

"Why, O Hamburg," we asked in chorus, "why did this old man refuse to unite you to her whom you loved? Did he not think you rich enough?"

"I am several times a millionaire," replied Hamburg.

"Did he doubt your honor?"

"No," said Hamburg.

"Then what pretext could he allege for his refusal?"

John Hamburg took a fifteenth glass of kummel.

"Some nonsense. He pretended that he was not the father of the young lady."

"Ah!"

"No, he was only her husband," concluded John Hamburg carelessly.—New York World.

Danger.

The evangelist pressed his hand.

"You have become a praying man?" he cried incredulously.

"Yes," replied the sallow party solemnly. "I pray every night upon retiring, and every morning I give thanks."

"Heaven be praised! What, if I may ask, turned your feet to the straight and narrow path?"

"A new realization of the uncertainty of life."

"Amen. Meditation?"

The sallow man shook his head.

"Folding bed," he answered simply.—Detroit Tribune.

Personal Reflection.

The conversation had turned on the transportation question, and Mr. Jagway, who was indulging in one of his regular spells of being perfectly sober, observed:

"If I had my way about it, the government would own the railways and carry people anywhere for one rate of fare without regard to distance, just as it carries letters in the mails."

"H'mph!" said Old Hunk. "You don't need to wait for that. You could put a stamp on your forehead and go through the mails any day as a 'periodical.'"

THE UNCLEAN IN COURT

Thirteen Wayfaring Men Not All Fools in Police Court.

JUDGE MORTON'S HOUSE STONED.

A Gang of Drunken Tramps Throw Rocks at His House.

Thirteen is said to be an unlucky number. There was an unlucky thirteen in police court this morning and they were all tramps. Mr. Ensinger put on his judicial frown and looked them over one by one.

George Williams, the police said, had been drunk but George denied it with tears in his eyes. He was on his way from Beatrice he said but did not remember where he was bound for. The officers said he staggered but George said he was asleep and as the judge had never seen a man stagger in his sleep, he would keep him on exhibition for five days.

Wm. Brown was drunk, too. He admitted it, but said he had never been in police court before and was sorry about it. The judge was sorry, too, and gave Bill five days in which to dry his tears.

Charley Myers, who had been looking about the interior of a box car accompanied only by a fever, was on his way to El Paso and the judge allowed him to continue his journey.

Charley Williams was pockmarked and very penitent. Charley had been drunk. Officer Campbell said he was drunk on hard cider and turpentine. Charley pleaded guilty to the cider and swore by the ghost of Farmer Smith that he would get right out of town within half an hour if given the chance. He wouldn't wait for a train; but the judge sort of liked Charley and will keep him for five days.

Sam Young was in a box car, too. There was nothing clean about Sam. In a few places where the dirt had been knocked off it seemed evident that he was a colored man. Sam was from Oange City and had brought up several bushels of coal dust with him which was quite awkward for a person. The judge ordered his release.

Jim Stanley and his crutch were in court this morning. Jim was from Hia watha and was not very clean either. He said he was a painter by trade but he was begging. The judge suspended his sentence for twenty-four hours and Jim will not loaf around Topeka long.

Charley Ward claimed to be a printer. He looked more like a coal heaver, delightfully unwashed. He was on his way from Omaha to Emporia and the judge had no desire to detain him.

Judge Morton's house was stoned yesterday afternoon by a gang of tramps who were drunk. No particular damage was done but it wasn't pleasant for the family. The police were notified and they succeeded in arresting Thomas Martin, Fred Bohanan, Joseph Emerson, Thomas Daly, Clarence Knowles and H. H. Carr and they are being held to await developments. Their cases will come up Monday morning.

FIREWORKS AND SPEECHES

The Democrats Will Make the Monday Evening Rally a Success.

The Democrats are making arrangements for their big rally to be held next Monday evening at Hamilton hall.

The speakers will be ex-Governor Glick, Gen. C. W. Blair and Thomas P. Fenlon. Senator Martin is expected to speak briefly.

The Democrat flambeau club has made arrangements for a display of fireworks, which will rival anything the club has given. The club will turn out at 7:30 and march up Kansas avenue to Eighth street.

WHAT TO DO WITH THEM.

Now That a Charivari Party is Convicted the Authorities are in Doubt.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 6.—A special to the Bee from Westpoint, Neb., says: George Boyer, 80 years old, married Monday. Twenty-three young men of the city concluded to indulge in a charivari party. The aged bridegroom became indignant and had all arrested and spent several hundred dollars in convicting them of disturbing his repose. They were ordered to jail today, but as it is a weak structure, the boys threatened to tear it down if incarcerated. Local authorities do not know what to do with the prisoners.

Judge Shot by a Liquor Dealer.

RENNYVILLE, Ind., Oct. 6.—John McCarthy of this town has failed to obtain a license to sell liquor at retail at Carthage a village five miles north of here, by reason of a citizens league's opposition, this morning assaulted Judge Wolf of the committee, firing two shots. One shot struck Wolf in the stomach and he is in a critical condition. McCarthy is now in jail.
